Dr. Rogalin's Message

Members of the Class of January 1940

New Utrecht High School

Dear Friends,

Permit me to congratulate you on the successful completion of your high school course. You will agree that as a result of your studies and faculty guidance at this institution your physical and spiritual development are far more advanced than if opportunity for this study had not been made available to you.

Probably the surest way to give weight to this judgment is to contrast your present status, whatever it may be, with that of the young people in most of the countries of the world today. I am certain that you will say with millions of your fellow countrymen "Thank God for America."

It is my sincere hope that one of the many benefits that accrued to you as a result of the education that our city and State gave to you, is the formulation of an active Ideal of Americanism. You, I hope have been so strongly imbued with this lofty motive that all your life you will be actuated by it. The welfare not only of our beloved Country but of the entire world is contingent on the extent to which future generations uphold Americanism and all that it implies. Since you are the proximate group to carry on, do it so that your successors will have greatly improved conditions under our splendidly democratic society.

May I not also at this time wish for each of you long, happy, and successful lives, in the service of America and Man!

Sincerely yours,

Maurice E. Rogalin
Principal

"The events and characters of this story are fictional and any similarity to the staff of the New Utrecht "NUHS" and the way it puts out a paper is purely coincidental."

The office of the "Central Hi Clarion" was in an uproar. The paper (which advocated a greater allotment of G.O. funds for their journalistic last edition

'petty cash' and a reduction in expenditures on such unnecessary items as "Teachers' and Students' Symposium on Whether the Central City Council Should Approve a Bill to Provide the City with a New Council Hall—$35") had a 24 hour deadline to meet and no one could find "Cyclone" Baxter, the Sports Editor. The only sports item pasted on the dummy was an insignificant little paragraph reading something like this::

"G.A.L.S. ON HIKE

The Girls' Athletic Club under the supervision of Miss Morgan went on a hike to Red Caverns last Saturday. It was reported that everyone had a grand time."

To add to the troubles of "Doc" Lewis, the "Clarion's" Editor-in-Chief, the galleys had been brought up from the printer and all the cutting, pasting and correcting was being done in the little 2 by 4 office.

In a corner of the room, Claudia "Shorty" Black and Shirley (Gee Ain't Clark Gable Handsome) Ferber, the two feature editors, were haggling with "Ace" Carlson, the paper's star reporter.

By LEONARD BARKIN

"Look, be sensible," Claudia was pleading. "You can't have two bylines on the same page. It don't look nice."

"At a time like this, I can't be sensible," Ace retorted. "That story I wrote on "Trees" is the best thing this sheet ever had and I'm going to get a by-line if it's the last thing I ever do."

"If you get it," Shirley threatened, "it's going to be the last thing you ever do. At least on this paper."

"Gimme my story," Ace shouted. "I ain't working for you dopes any more. I quit."

"Good. You're fired," Claudia corrected. Ace flew out of the office.

"What was that?" Doc asked, "A hurricane?"

"No, only Ace quitting again," came the answer.

"Gosh darn it. How many times a day does that guy hafta quit."

In the center of the office, rather majestically sprawled on the floor was "Newsy" Baker, the News Editor. All around him were galleys, dummys, paper, glue, scissors and all the rest of the material which distinguishes an exalted editor from a common reporter. Just as he opened his mouth to say something, Doc shouted, "Pledgee!"

"Yessir," came from a terrified, little lad in a corner.

new utrecht activities

"Go find Cyclone. We need him. Don't come back without him."
 "But where should I look for . . ."
 "Silence. Look anywhere. I don't care how but find him. And when you come back, remind me to ask you to assume the angle."
 "Yessir." Then "ouch."
 The Pledgee had received the necessary aid to propel him through the door.
 "Who is the editor of the Clarion?" asked a meek, little girl standing in the doorway.
 "I am. What do you want?" Doc said.
 "I gotta story for you. It's about the poster contest of the yearbook and . . ."
 "Look," Doc eulogized. "You're a nice little girl, you write beautifully, it's the best story I ever read but," and Doc blew up, "get the dickens out of here! We're trying to put out a paper!"
 The door slammed shut.
 Silence. And then.
 "Hiya folks," In walked Ace. "Boy have I got an idea or have I got an idea. Boy oh boy it's a honey."
 "What are you back again?" asked Claudia.
 "Yep it's me in the flesh and rarin' to go. Listen to this . . . No, gimme a typewriter. I'll write for you."
 Quiet reigned for awhile.
 A knock on the door.
 "Who is out yonder?" Newsy yawned.
 "It's me—Pledgee."
 "Enter," yelled Doc. "Did you find him?"
 "Yessir. He's in the Dean's office. He cut History to listen to the Make-Believe Ballroom. He's got detention."
 "Detention—and no sports page. Owwww." Doc fainted.
 As usual the paper came out—a day late.

LOVE LETTER

"I love you dear," the letter read,
 Written in pale green ink
 The words were full of feeling
 More feeling than you think
 Of course, the letters shook a bit,
 And some were far apart,
 But to be sure the words were there
 And came right from the heart.
 "I want to come and kiss you dear,"
 Now you may think that bold,
 But really, how are you to know,
 It was written by a five year old?

On Naming Dogs

The modern lady taking her pet bull-dog out for an airing, curious to know how her pet arrived at his name, will be told a not-too-pretty story. The ancestors of the modern bull-dog were used for bull-baiting. The dogs, put upon the bull, tried to seize him by the nose and hold on. The bull tried to gore and disembowel the dogs. It was difficult for the bull to toss a low-set dog, so short-legged, heavy animals were bred. Also, when the dog sunk his teeth into the bull's nose, the flesh swelled up and covered the dog's nostrils, making it difficult for the animal to breathe. Breeders consequently bred dogs with turned up noses, the characteristic feature of milady's bull-dog.

On The Origin of Words

When you say a house and lot you may not know it, but the word "LOT" is as American as Plymouth Rock. In fact, it was first used on Plymouth Rock. When the Pilgrims landed, they divided the land in the simplest way they knew. They drew lots for it. Thenceforth, every man's share of land was called his "lot." The word, in the sense, is used only in this country. It has never been used in that way in Great Britain.

On "Jalopies"

Every schoolboy knows what a "jalopy" is, but who knows the origin of the word? "Old Broken-down Fords," frequently were exported to Mexico, many to Jalapa. Hence, in Southern California, any floppy car became a "jalopy." "Jalopy is of Yiddish-Polish origin," writes another, "and is really a transliteration of the word "schlappe," meaning an old nag or horse. In its present form it is applied to cars of old vintage with little power and anemic appearance."

On "Wrong Ways"

Publicity dogs "Wrong Way" Corrigan's footsteps like a faithful hound, and some of it is not of his own manufacture. A "wrong way" pulse, an abnormal condition in which blood is permitted to flow back into the heart because of the faulty closing of the aortic valve, is known to medical science as a "Corrigan Pulse." This disease occasionally results in the pulse "disappearing" for a short time. But doughty Douglas Corrigan had nothing to do with this "wrong way" pulse. The abnormality is named after Dr. D. J. Corrigan, a Dublin physician who died in 1880.

A faded old house stands back of the quays down at Portland Point, and its gaunt, grayish appearance forbids any warmth or laughter for which the fisher-homes at the Point are noted. Gray shutters hang on single hinges, and the clap-boards sound loudly against the sides of the house when the wind blows up. The sloshing of the dark, slimy water against the poles beneath the quays supplements of the chilly, damp atmosphere.

old sally

The fisher-folk at Portland Point fear this house. "It has the ghost of a little boy," said one.

"And he was a cripple at that," claimed a second.

"Haven't ya' heard about his hunch and his crazy laugh?" asked another.

"The way he smiled at a person was enough to set a man running," shrieked a fourth.

By GLADYS BASSE

"Ya know," said the first fisherman, "there's only one of us that ever took a liken' to the boy, and that's old Sally. She probably thought the lad was crazy too, but she liked him. When the boy died of pneumonia, she had this here house of his closed up, and would ya' believe it—she won't let a soul go insideit!"

"Look, there she is," and we turned about to see an ancient fisher-woman trudge slowly out the garden gate towards the group in which I stood.

"What d'ya' all want?" she demanded.

"N-nothin' Sally, nothin'," replied one of the fishermen. "We was just telling this feller from the city about the little boy who used to live hear. Ya' ain't mad are ya'?"

"What good would it do me anyhow? I liked the lad and I felt sorry for him. Anything wrong in that?"

A chorus of "no" and "of course not" arose; after a fisherman had pressed Sally to tell me more about the little boy, she related what she knew of him.

"Every morning he used to come down here. He said he liked to come out on the Point because it was so quiet. Oftimes, I saw him walk staring at the sun and smiling. The first time I saw him, I thought he was going to dig for quahangs, but the tide was up, and he didn't carry a rake with him. He liked to walk barefoot in the sand. I said to myself that someday the boy would catch his deaths' cold, because the chilly morning air isn't good for anyone's bones, not even the young one's. He was a silly little boy, but I liked him."

Sally began to snifle, she cleared her throat and continued.

"He wanted to write books, at least that's what he planned to do, and he even wanted to go to college. Think of that will you, he—wanting a college education! Many times I asked him what good a college education would be to a fisherboy, but he always shrugged his little shoulders and said he would not stay here as his father had and his father's father before him."

"Did ya' hear that?" bellowed one of the fishermen. "It was good enough for his father, but not good enough for him!" The group began to laugh, but then Sally refuted.

"He had brains; he wasn't like you," their smiles faded, and they looked at one another guiltily.

"It was shameful," Sally continued, "that the poor laddie was so deformed. You know, they told me that his father ran away to the city when he was a baby. I suppose he tired of it; we folks down here usually do, you know. At any rate, he married, and when he came back, he brought the little lad with him. None of the children here ever played with the little boy; they were afraid of him. I was about the only friend he had. You know, he used to tell me about the thousands of little folks he had for friends. I often asked him where they lived, but he only smiled at me and then ran down to the water's edge and sifted the sand through his fingers. He was a silly lad to be wanting to play in the sand all day. And he never went fishing. He said it hurt him to see the fishes' eyes popping out and the blood dripping all over their mouths when they were hooked."

"What a tender, delicate boy!" gushed one of the group. Sally looked at the fisherman angrily, and he quickly withdrew from the crowd.

"I think that if it were up to the laddie, there'd never be any fishing. Imagine the world without fish," and she paused to laugh. "It's a silly thing though, isn't it? But what could you expect from a little lad? Once he did a very queer thing. He waded into the water up to his knees, and when I told him he'd be catching his deaths' cold, he just starred at me and laughed and laughed. Sally stopped talking to view the effect of her story upon her audience. She appeared satisfied, for she continued, almost confidently.

"Once he told me that he would go far away. When I asked him where he would be gone to, he looked at me in that queer way of his, and said that only his sand friends knew where it would go. He said that it was a secret between them and that he couldn't tell a soul about it. Mind you now, a secret! A funny child he was.

"You know, I was afraid of his cough and his catching cold in the morning air. On the day that he didn't come to see me, I thought that maybe he had gone away with his little friends who live in the sand. But I knew the laddie would have said good-bye to me."

Sally started to cry. She blew her nose loudly and brushed her tears away on the sleeve of her weathered sweater. "Away with ya' now. All of you. Go on—away!" and she shooed her audience away. When the crowd did not disperse, she turned and walked hurriedly back through the garden from which she had come. I watched her open the cellar door of the house, and as she descended, one of the fishermen remarked. "Sally must be losing her mind worshipping the little boy like this."

"Yes," agreed the others and shook their heads sadly.

UNKNOWN WOMAN

While visting a friend one afternoon
A handsome gentleman dropped in
One moment strangers, the next moment lovers.
We were married and the years brought us eight children
All still alive, but for one dead in Germany
Dead mentally
For if you are now in Germany
You are as good as dead.
When they were growing up
I kept house, sewed, cooked, and nursed them when sick.
Until they grew up and had families of their own.
Then I just sat and prayed all day
For my beloved husband had passed away.
I sat thinking of my full life in the days gone by Wishing I could live it over again.
Until one night I felt very sick
And ere the morning had begun
I passed into a different world.
I had loved life
But I had lived it too long
Lived too long to see
Men take over Europe
And threaten the land of the free.

By Janet Kaiser

OUR LIFE

We two were very young once
We loved our fields, our work, and our crops.
Living for each other and later
our young ones—We enjoyed a simple life.
Our work was our play,
And the happy sun smiled
With us constantly.
Years ripened our life
And sent our children
To their own happy roads.
It has separated Paul and me
But only for a brief time.
Now as I sit alone
The dreary night is enlightened
With the thoughts of our youth,
And our fields, and our children.
Tomorrow that same sun of yesteryear
Will shine down on me alone
It will smile with me too.

By Norma Mottola

Golly, you'd kinda get the idea it was all his fault. The way she stamped her foot, turned around, just in time for him to see a tear trickle down her freckled face. What was that his dad once said, "Yeah, women will always resort to tears once all their other wiles are exhausted." His especially a red-headed one." His motto was, "Never trust a woman," but that was the last time she got angry at him.

And now, now here he was a fellow his age sitting on her stoop and being mopey about a girl. Not even a really pretty girl but one with the funniest color red hair. He tugged at his belt—as if to replace the tugging at his heart or better still he hoisted his pants—cause maybe that would sort of hoist his spirits. Well anyway, there he was on her stoop, waiting. If she would only stop acting like an infant! If she would only peek out of the curtain, wave to him or something. Anything. Ah, what's the use! She can't help it at all, she can't help anything—it was all her mother's fault, always buttin in. Gee! Things have come to a pretty pass when a feller can't take the girl he loves for a drive. Golly that was harmless enough driving!

He didn't care. He didn't care at all. There were plenty of fish in the sea! Plenty of other girls!—Girls who would be mighty proud to ride around with a fellow who had a nice new red kiddie car.

two short stories

By ELLEN MANDEL

Scene: The prescription department of a drug store. It is Christmas Eve and the druggist prepares to spend his usually quiet evening listening to the radio. He turns on the radio and a voice announces the fact that a message of peace on the Christmas Eve is about to be given.

Voice: "In many parts of this stricken world, the tears of long, long files of men and women, driven from their homes by blind hatred, wandering from country to country in misery and want, are quenching the Light of God which for thousands of years has guided the footsteps of your fathers and mine. The cries of war are drowning the sound of God's voice . . . "

A thief enters the store and with gun in hand, indicates what he wants. Policeman comes. Policeman and gunman are severely wounded.

Voice: " . . . Long ago, it was prophesied that 'men shall beat their swords into ploughshares and their spears into priming forks'; men shall not lift up sword against man; neither shall they learn war and . . . "

More policemen enter; they help carry out the wounded policeman, the injured druggist and the insensibly beaten gunman.

" . . . When man's hand shall be outstretched, it shall be in the nature of help, not harm; in the nature of service, not in injury; in the nature of goodfellowship, not in enmity. God grant the men may live in peace and harmony; all for one and one for all."

Time—Thursday, January 4, 1940 (Four days before the Jackson Day Dinner and the discovery of America's No. 1 humorist.).

Place—New Utrecht, famed for a Dramatic Society which has always managed to get rave notices from the critics . . . of the Utrecht Nuhs.

8:15! Mr. Ehrlich's baton rises and the strains of the overture reaches the ears of an expectant audience.

The music ends and Burly Jack Potash and Blurry-Eyed Irving Goidel of Schnur's Stage Squad, Inc. go into action and the curtains part revealing onstage a theatre in the background of cyrano de bergerac

an inn "somewhere in France." The cash customers as well as the teachers in the front rows are already gaping at the beautiful scenery and the excellent lighting effects.

As yet not a gesture had been made nor a word spoken, still the audience has already moved forward to the edges of their seats in anticipation of a great show.

Adjectives by
MORRIS DWECK and
HAROLD WEBMAN

And as they anticipated, so it was. From the moment the cavaliers start their fencing exercises in the first act to Cyrano's fifth act death, it was easy to see that the New Utrecht Dramatic Society's presentation of "Cyrano de Bergerac" was the most spectacular and greatest in its eventful fifteen-year history. So successful, in fact, was the play that besides the scheduled January 4th, 5th and 6th performances, a demand performance was given on January 13th.

And who is responsible for this hit?

A great many people, from whom we choose Jack Chakrin for initial honors. Chakrin, as most every good Utrechtite knows, played Cyrano.

From the moment Cyrano throws Montfleury off-stage and for approximately three hours more, the long-nosed soldier must dominate the play with the force of his character. He fights a duel, makes love for another to his only love, leads his regiment in a war and dies a magnificent death, all within three hours. And Chakrin does make Cyrano the dominant character. He performed more magnificently than any member of the audience ever dreamed of seeing. Every word he said added to the greatness of the production. Yes, indeed, Jack Chakrin brought fame both to himself and New Utrecht as he spoke and moved about on the great New Utrecht stage.

But it was not Chakrin alone who was responsible for the play's success. Isabelle Cohen played the leading feminine role, that of Roxanne, Cyrano's cousin and secret love. She performed eloquently in a difficult role. Miss Cohen appeared on the stage as a spiteful, young, beautiful girl who loves the dashing young men who speak and write beautiful words about her.

Robert Le Shufy portrayed Christian de Neuville, a young soldier, who is madly in love with Roxanne but who is handicapped in this love affair by his lack of the power to write and speak eloquently. He makes a deal with Cyrano whereby his good looks and Cyrano's words would

BACKSTAGE AT CYRANO

By Murray Leff

woo Roxanne. Le Shufy played his role as author Edmond Rostand probably visioned him, good-looking, dashing but weak in front of women.

In the role of De Guiche, a nobleman who also has a liking for Roxanne, was Zelly Donneson. Donneson made a perfect job of his character as his jealousy for Roxanne's love was brought out. Incidentally, this is the same Zelly Donneson who is famous as an orator in Utrecht.

Eliot Agush handled the comedy relief well in the role of Rageuneau, the pastry cook. His acting at the beginning of the second act in the pastry shop scene drew plenty of laughs from the audience. Agush kept untarnished his reputation as an actor in this school.

Marcella Marksamer turned in a fine bit as the fidgety, flirtatious Duenna. Al Lebarwitch turned in a great piece as the Meddler in the first act. Marvin Berman appeared just about as drunk as he was supposed to be as Ligniere. Harold Webman was excellent in two small parts, those of Montfleury, the actor in the first act and the Captain of the Cadets, Carbon de Castel-Jaloux. The actors who portrayed members of the crowd and the cadets all acted to perfection.

Credit is due the Stage Crew under Jerry Schnur's supervision, including lights, scene changing, making of scenery and so on.

And now . . . Mr. Isidore Rosenzweig.

Guiding the aspiring thespians through stormy rehearsals over a period of more than three months, Mr. Rosenzweig, in his last production at Utrecht was determined to make "Cyrano" his best. His interpretation of the play, did more than anything else to keep this play in the memories of the Utrecht students for years to come.

Wait, here comes the signal from Mr. Rosenzweig for a slow curtain at the end of the last act. The "Two Stooges," Buster Simensky and Abe Blumenfield are getting ready to "walk the curtain," the "properties" are being collected by Flo Turchin and Hall Tall, and the loudspeaker is being disconnected by Abe Faigelman.

(This review has been compiled by the editors of the New Utrecht Nuhs who urge you to subscribe to the school paper during the coming term.)

The '39 season brought to New Utrecht the saddest sports news in its history, the sudden death of the chairman of the Boys' P. T. department, Mr. George J. Zinovoy.

Mr. Zinovoy was a well-known figure in high school sports, his position of chairman of the P.S.A.L. Games Committee attesting to this statement. It was also Mr. Zinovoy, if we recall correctly, who put up a terrific struggle to bring baseball back to New Utrecht and finally succeeded in the Spring of '39. It was really a blow to Green and White sports when he passed away.

a review of sports

Football— Since this was the Fall term, the gridiron again assumes its position as the leading sport in New Utrecht.

A potentially powerful football team, captained by George Chieffo and coached by the able Mr. Jerry Shaw, was too erratic to really get any place and finally finished the season with the unimpressive record of one victory, one deadlock, and five defeats.

By ERWIN SIMENSKY

The gridgers started off with a defeat at the hands of Manual, to the tune of 19-0. They followed this up with a 13-6 victory over Brooklyn Tech, the only triumph of the season.

The thriller with Erasmus was next on the schedule and although the Greenies lost to the tune of 20-9, the efforts of Joe Biondo made it a moral victory. It was "Handsome Joe" who kicked the spectacular field goal that put the Buccos ahead by 9-7. (Editor's Note: Although Biondo kicked from the Buff and Blue 28 yard line, the 10 yard end zone made it a 38 yard kick).

The Curtis squad took the pigskinner's by 7-0, and Madison followed the Staten Islanders example and put the Greenies on the short end of the 18-6 score.

A terrific battle with Jefferson followed, with the Buccos holding the highly-favored, all-powerful Orange and Black eleven to a 6-6 deadlock. It was in this game that the Bensonhursts were robbed of their second triumph. The Kelly-Greens were on the Jeff one and a half yard line when the final whistle blew.

Lincoln administered the final defeat of the season when they took the boys over the hurdles by a 12-0 count.

It was also in this season that Irv Kintisch, the big right tackle made the World-Telegram All-Scholastic, but didn't get the chance to play in Miami, when the trip got involved in official red-tape.

In the Penn Relays of 1928, Charlie Padock dodged tons of bricks and hurdled fallen spectators as the stands collapsed and yet ran 175 yards in the world record time of 17:2/5 seconds.

The ball left the bat of the great "Babe" Ruth at a speed of 120 miles per hour when he smashed out his homers.

The longest relay in history was run by runners carrying a torch, symbol of Olympic Games, from Greece to Berlin in 1936.

Arthur Nehf beat the Yanks in a World Series game by pitching opposite to John McGraw's instructions from the bench.

Track—Although, at the time of this writing, the Bensonhurst speedsters had only battled in two meets, it certainly looks as though they're on their way to a successful season.

In the opening Stuyvesant meet the pine-boardmen collected a total of 14 points to finish in third place behind DeWitt Clinton and Bishop Loughlin.

Jimmy Lombardo was New Utrecht's "fair-haired boy" in this meet, actually walking away with the 880 yard novice event, finishing 25 yards in front of his nearest rival.

The Knights of Columbus meet was the next chance the tracksters had and in the only high school event held at the meet took second place behind Bryant High. This was the 220 yard relay in which Cohen, Goldwein, Wise, and Caridi represented the Big Green (a deadline on this story prevented news of the Dickinson meet, held on January 13, from being published herein).

Joe Louis knocked down Stanley Poseda 3 times for a total count of 38 seconds. First count, Poseda was up at nine—second count lasted 19 seconds due to fact that Illinois boxing rules allow fighters 20 seconds to get back into the ring. Final count of ten came a few moments later.

The first forward pass ever tried by Yale beat Harvard in 1906.

Kansas City beat the Rainbow A. C. 234—2 in a basketball game in 1924.

Soccer—Winding up second only to an undefeated Manual team, the booters led by Captain Al Schraeter and aided by coaches Ross and Kaye had a moderately successful season.

They opened up in high gear when they drubbed Boys High 4-0, but their next opponents were a little tougher and so they were held to a 1-1 tie with Erasmus.

They then dropped a 2-0 decision to the Manual champs but came back to take the important Lafayette game by 1-0. They closed the season with an unimportant 3-1 defeat at the hands of Eastern District.

The game between Philadelphia and Chicago played in 1922 was a pitcher's nightmare. Score—Chicago 26, Philadelphia 23, and no errors on either side.

Jackson Haines, a Chicago lad, originated and taught the style of figure skating which the Europeans are now teaching back to the Americans. He showed them how in 1864.

Hockey—The puckmen started off with a 3-0 triumph over Jackson that barely showed the calibre of the squad Coach Feely turned out, but their next encounter was with Jamaica, former champs, and it was really a corker. The Bucs led by Captain Bud Crutchley let loose with a scoring attack that netted them four goals to the Jamaicans one. It was in this tussle that the Greenies first gave the world a glimpse of their puck prowess.

The blademen tackled Brooklyn Tech next and lost on a heartbreaker.

A scuffle in front of the Utrecht cage resulted in a score for Tech when one of their forwards (still unidentified) happened to kick it in. The Utrechtites avenged themselves, however, with a 2-0 trouncing of Manual.

They then went down to a 1-0 defeat before a Textile onslaught, but rose up and smashed Jackson 3-0. The following battle was a scoreless deadlock with Jamaica, and at the time of this writing we were waiting for a return match with Brooklyn Tech.

Hollanders argue that they played "KOWF" before the Scots—KOWF is Dutch for club—P. S. we're talking about GOLF.

While at Texas Christian, "Slinging" Sam Baugh, threw the pigskin a distance of over two miles.

James J. Braddock was the first heavy-weight champ in the history of the ring to go into a title bout on the short end of the betting—in his fight with Joe Louis.

First sacker Harry Davis wore two uniforms in one day. He played a double header and was at first base for the Giants in the first game. He was traded to Pittsburgh between games and played with the Pirates in the second game.

Basketball—Coach Goldberg's boys may not have the ability possessed by their predecessors of the '38-'39 season, but they certainly have the fight.

The two season-openers, both non-P.S.A.L. resulted in a 33-31 triumph over Boys High and a 28-20 victory over Seward Park. Madison was next on the list and we certainly must give the Black and Gold the credit they deserve, for in their 44-23 victory over the Big Green, they showed us a brand of ball-handling far superior to anything we've ever seen before on a high school floor.

The next P.S.A.L. battle was more of a rout, for the hoopsters squelched Manual Training by a 47-35 count.

Lincoln and Erasmus, two traditional enemies of ours, followed soon after. The Coney Islanders halted the basketeers to the tune of 28-23. The winning goal in the Erasmus game was scored in the last twenty seconds by Captain Nino Presti, on a one-handed "western" shot. The final score was 25-23, in the Greenies' favor.

Although the Erasmus tilt was the closing of the terms' schedule there are still four more games left on the P.S.A.L. calendar, which come during next term.

THAT ELUSIVE GINK

A reddish mist across the sky,
A heavy earth that's far from dry,
From heaven shoot down crystal streaks,
And each slants to the spot it seeks.

Some drop in cans. Some choose to dwell
Atop a tree, or in a bell.
One may perhaps wish to relax
Beside a box of colored tacks.

A tiny ball of purest rain
Came sliding down a window pane.
So slow but sure it reached its goal,
And fell into a flower bowl.

Each drop is destined. All must land.
Some make oasis in the sand.
Huge clouds store crystals, sums untold,
To quench a thirst the earth does hold.

beautify new utrecht contest winners

New Utrecht High, the school I love
And cherish with a loyal heart,
I aim to treasure and secure
Your life-long beauty ne'er we part.

My precious days within your walls
Will ever be a guiding light,
To seek my fortune near and far,
To know the wrong; to know the right.

To show the school my gratitude;
To show my gracious attitude,
I plant a root, a sapling dear,
To sprout and grow throughout the year.

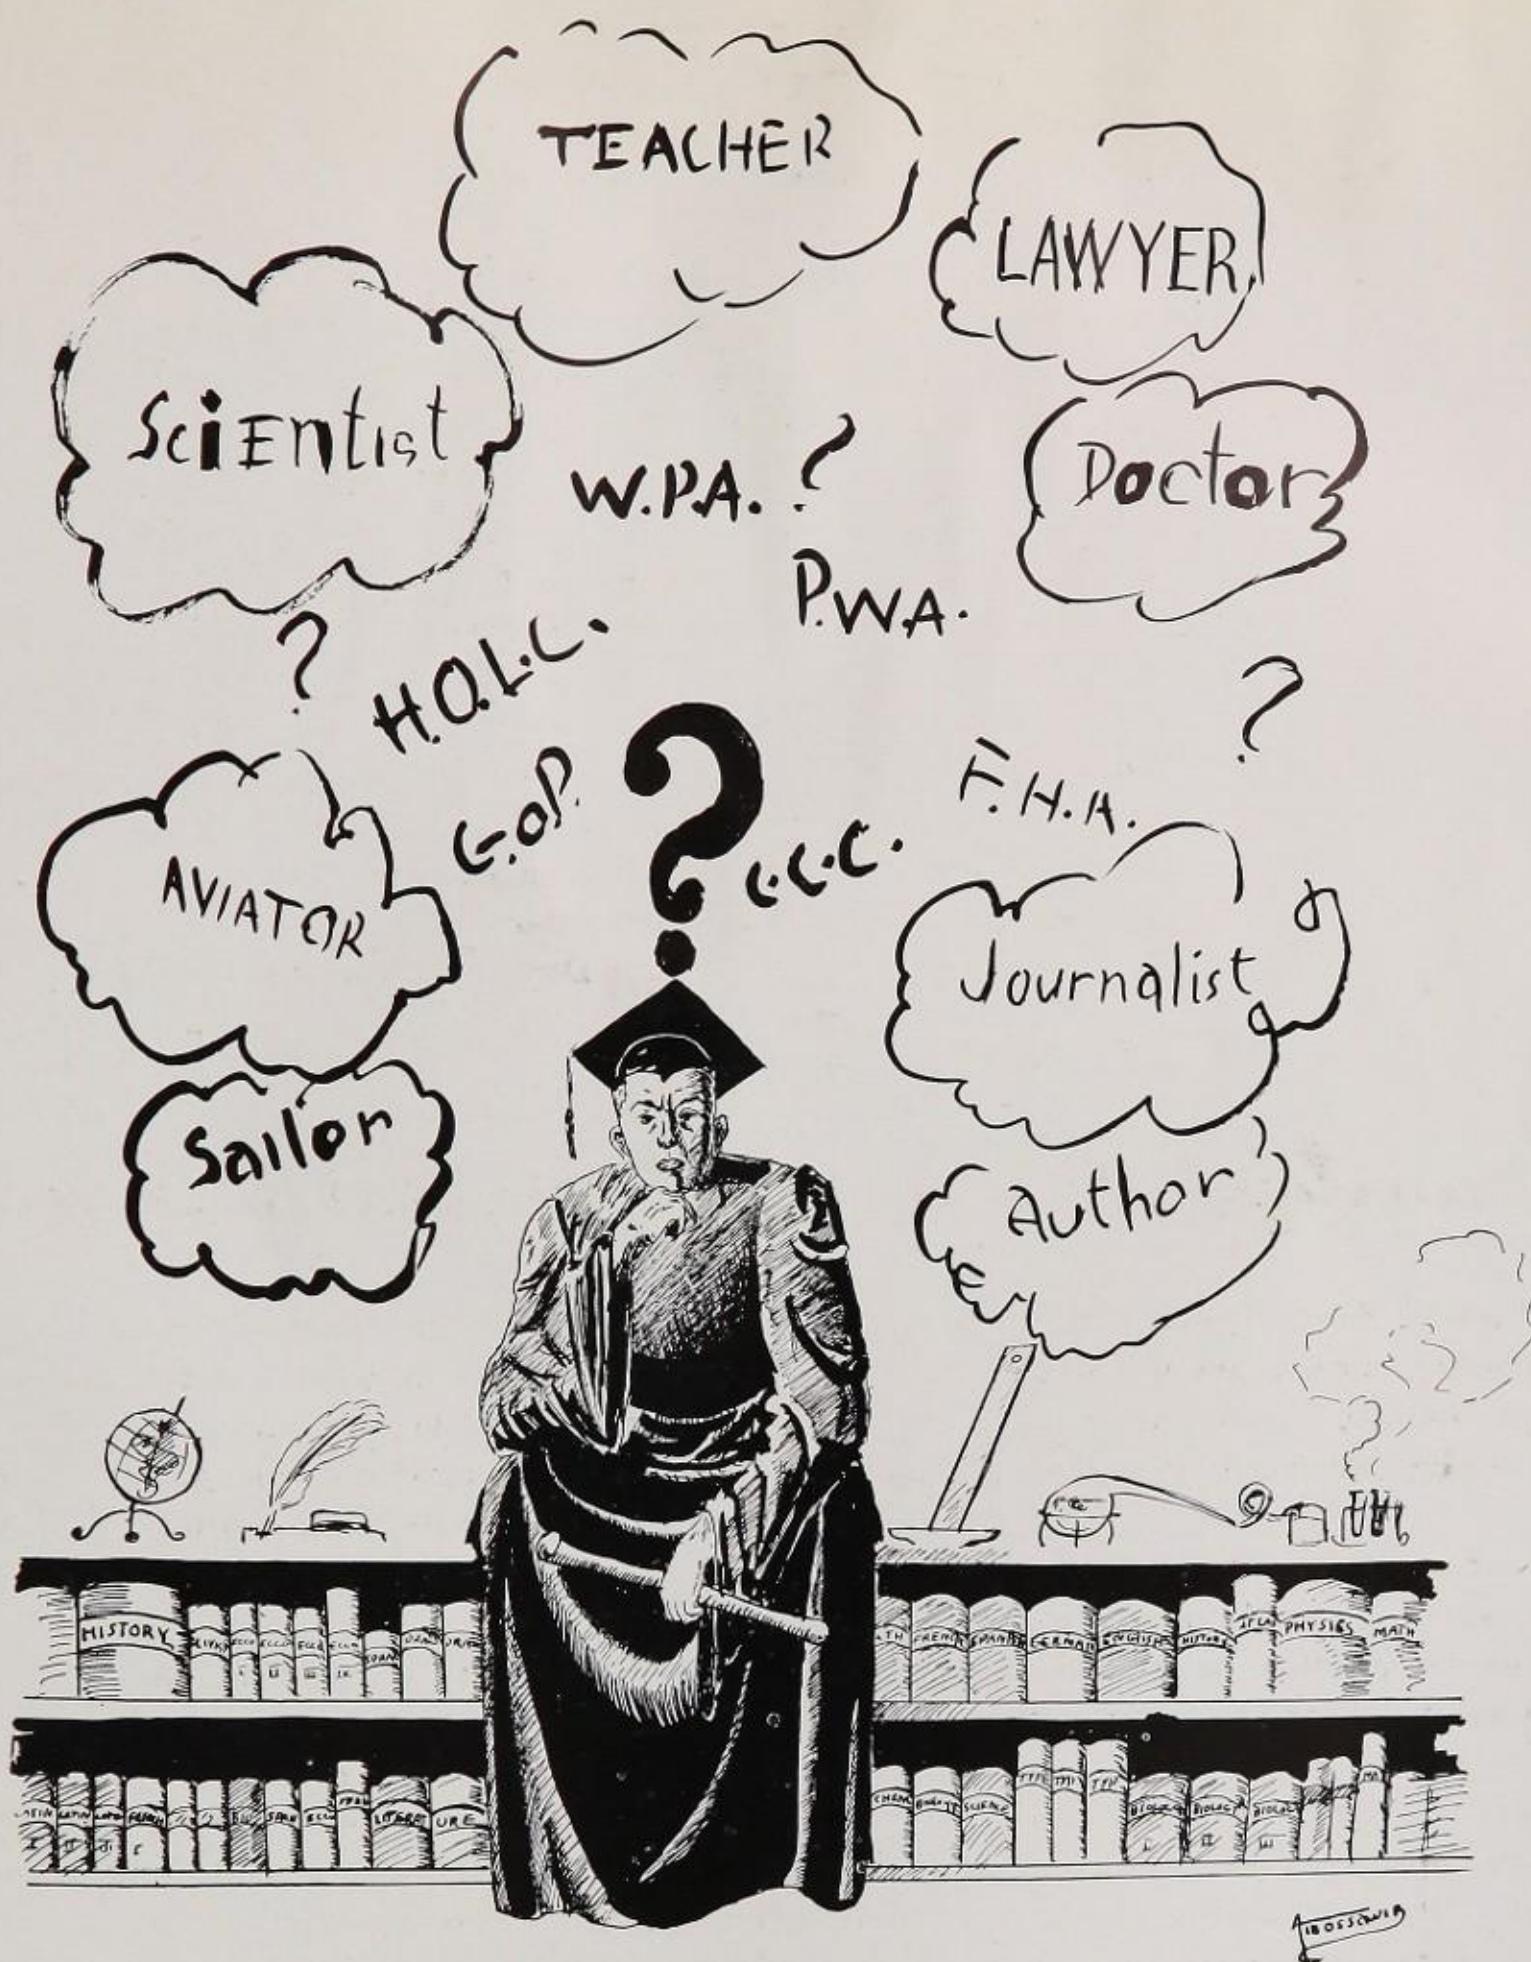

To bloom and blossom with God's might
With precious fruit grown strong and right,
To beautify our Alma Mater
With arts and plants of human nature.

Fred Feder—2nd Prize

The hand of God first planted trees
The hand of man then tore down these.
He covered all with hard cement
Now our time would be well spent
To plant again that living beauty
Now indeed it is our duty.

It seems as though that act to me,
Would transform from a factory
A building, dreary, cold and bare,
To one with ivy covered walls so fair.
Then warmth and light would come once more
And make a "New Utrecht" to adore.
A New Utrecht of which we'd all be proud,
And then would sing its praise aloud,
Beautify New Utrecht! Happy thought
Then one day, not far away
For New Utrecht will come a new day.

Viola Penzel—3rd Prize

VINCENT GUARNA, 8755—19th Ave.; Annex Service New Utrecht's a good school no doubt; but he's very glad to get out.

ALBERT KNUDSEN, 184 Battery Ave.; Annex Service Squad Lieutenant, Annex Office Squad Captain, Madrigal Society 3 terms. He's got that healthy school-girl complexion.

HOWARD WASBERG, 747—42nd St.; Rensselaer Poly Tech; Mimeograph Squad 2 terms, Service Squad 2 terms, Biology Club 2 terms. Just another Utrechtite!

SYLVIA GELLES, 112 May 13th St.; Brooklyn College; Nuhs Reporter 2 terms, Cheerleader, Office Squad 3 terms. Cheerful, smiling, always dependable; everything about her is commendable.

GRACE PUGLISI, 1580—76th St.; Hunter College; Dean's Squad 2 terms, Basketball Club, Volleyball Club. A lass with a golden smile; who makes you feel that life's worthwhile.

GERTRUDE SIEGAL, 8639—28rd Ave.; Business; Auditorium Squad, Office Squad, Lunchroom Squad. She's cute and small; and liked by all.

MAXINE CANTOR, 956—59th St.; Grade Adviser's Squad. A pleasant smile and many a curl; makes a peach of this charming girl.

ROSE FUCHS, 4209—15th Ave.; Brooklyn College, Gym Squad, Office Squad. She's just like a chocolate bar—sweet and nutty.

MARIE DE MARCO, 1631—42nd St.; Business; Gym Squad, Office Squad. She's so shy; we wonder why?

ESTHER KATZ, 1965 Cropsey Ave.; Business; Office Squad, Auditorium Squad, Lunchroom Squad. Her daze in school have finally ended.

MURIEL KAUFMAN, 714 E. 5th St.; Business College; Monitor's Squad, Swimming Squad. She doesn't have much to say; but we like her anyway.

GEORGE LIEBNER, 7722—20th Ave.; N.Y.U.; Mimeograph and Supply Squad, Physics Squad, Minerology Club. Strangth of mind is exercise, not rest.

ANITA WAXMAN, 1450—48th St.; Brooklyn College. They come no sweeter than Anita.

EDITH FEINSTEIN, 5413—9th Ave.; Brooklyn College; Vice-Pres. of G.O.; Senior Arista; Annex President. If she were president it would be nice; but still in all she is our vice.

THOMAS DECICCO, 6816—16th Ave.; Lunchroom Squad (Lieut.), Service Squad. Here's one guy who certainly can; be proud of his gal—Miss Susan.

GRACE CAFARELLA, 1501—69th St.; Columbia University; Nurses' Club, Aid in Dean's Office, General Science Club. A winning smile, a helping hand; a real good sport, we think she's grand.

JOSEPHINE SANFILIPPO, 188 Bay 19th St.; L.I.U.; Pres. of G.A.L. 3 terms, P.T. Squad 6 terms, Library Squad 2 yrs. "See you in Wimbledon, Jo."

ROSE PULEO, 6617—20th Ave., C.C.N.Y.; Girls' Dean's Office (Annex 180), English Office (Annex 180), Service Squad. It's nice to be natural, when you're naturally nice.

VIOLET DABAH, 501 Ave. S.; N.Y.U.; Tennis Club, Office Squad, Capt. of Gym Squad. A quiet girl of sterling worth, is more than all gold on earth.

FLORENCE SHAPIRO, 5001—14th Ave.; American Academy of Dramatic Arts; French Squad, Biology Squad, Jr. and Sr. Arista. A smart young girl with the heart of a pearl.

LILA ROSENBERG, 2152—85th St.; Pratt Institute; Hall Squad, Library Squad, Lunchroom Squad. Nice, neat, neat, and petite; a girl who is sweet.

PHIL SCHNEIDER, 7320—18th Ave.; Chicago; Class Nuhs Representative, Class "Comet" Representative. He never has very much to say; but we like him anyway.

IRMA SEIDEN, 973—44th St.; Business; Office Squad, Secretary of Prefect, Floor Squad. Sorry boys, we're not permitted to give phone numbers.

PETRINA COLOMBO, 2156—83rd St.; Columbia University; Lunchroom Squad, Italian Tutoring Squad, French Tutoring Squad. A pleasant girl we all like well; of whom we have no faults to tell.

PEARL COHEN, 1123—55th St.; Smith College. Floor Manager's Squad, Secretary of Eco. Class, Jr. Arista. A perfect specimen; she's got brains, she's nice, and you can see the rest.

SALVATORE PIPITONE, 1547—58th St.; Georgia Tech. Sal's only service is graduation.

CORNELIUS CRESCENZO, 2559 Stillwell Ave.; Columbia University; Madrigal Society, Service Squad. Singer, eh?—well, if at first you don't succeed, take a hint.

BERNARD SHIMMERMAN, 2069—75th St.; Fordham University; Varsity Football, Service Squad, Representative of Boys' Athletic Dept. He'll be remembered in the hearts of football fans—and girls!

ROBERT STIEBER, 1572—57th St.; Hunter College; Baseball, Service Squad. —and he doesn't know that Hunter is a girls' school!

WILLIAM RICCIO, 2246—80th St.; Notre Dame University; Service Squad, Artist for Annex Paper. Don't fret if you can't make Notre Dame; for anywhere you go, you will find fame.

COSMO PELLECCCHIA, 1373—40th St.; Delahanty Institute; P.T. Squad, Commercial Bookroom. He's from N.U.H.S. Can he help it?

ANTHONY CASTRIGNANO, 1011—65th St.; Fordham; Service Squad. I'd be telling lies.

GEORGE G. RUTHENBERG, 110 Avenue C.; Julliard School of Music. He acts well, talks well, and baffles his teachers.

GLADYS BASSE, 2146—61st St.; Brooklyn College; Biology Squad, Dramatic Club, Writer's Club. She made friends so fast, that she doesn't want to go back to Rhode Island any more.

JOSEPH BELLO, 5904—7th Ave.; Football, Baseball, Service Squad. A true Englishman—always in a fog. He probably preferred blondes—even in the dark ages.

FLORENCE MEDWAY, 1551 West 11th St.; Business College; Bookroom Squad (Annex 180), Gym Squad. A pleasing disposition always saves the day.

David Jerome, successor to Billy Rose, gives out the information that his newest extravaganza, "Unhand That Girl" or "Heaven Protects The Working Gal," goes into production soon. Jerome is the nom de plume of Jerry Schnur, a former Utrechtite who was so misunderstood at his Alma Mater to be elected Boy Genius by the Senior Class of 1940. It is understood that the leads are to be handled by Roxanne Cohen and "Cyrano" Chakrin who received their early training at New Utrecht High School . . . We are informed that No.

prospectus

132465A (Red Ahearne) was voted the Most Popular Inmate at Ossining. Ahearne, a Utrechtite, (wouldn't you know) has retained his popularity down through the years ever since he was elected Most Popular Boy at New Utrecht . . . Morris Dweck, a journalist of some renown, was astounded to learn that his book, "See America Thirst" had sold a hundred copies in its first printing. Because of this unprecedented success Doc, as he is affectionately known, will reprint the great opus . . . Florence Helen Turchin, well known fashion expert of the Daily "Pews", is being sued by Sally Rand, recently chosen No. 1 of the ten best dressed women in the world, for libel about her clothes. "Boss" Emil Meli is under indictment by the Grand Jury for his control of the Regents insurance racket. Meli insures high school students who are taking Regents against failure. He bribes officials to tell him what the questions will be, then he issues the answers to his policy holders.

Seen about New York:

Buster Simensky, once chosen "Most Likely to Succeed," seen at the Troc—toting trays of dishes for ten bucks a week and tips . . . Shirley Ackerman, Most Popular Girl of the Senior Class of 1940, posing for Lifebuoy ads . . . Harriet Kauss has organized a society for homeless Fiji Islanders, designed to bring them relief. Miss Krause has long been known for her soft heart even in high school where she was chosen the Most Friendliest Girl . . . Ray Leshefsky running for re-election to the Presidency of the Utrecht Alumni Association. If he succeeds it will be his tenth term. (We'll bet a certain former President of the United States is blushing in envy) . . . Joe Bellantoni brought the house down with his rendition of "Vesti La Giuba" at the opening of the Metropolitan Opera House season. The music, incidentally, was conducted by Sammy Baron, a former Utrecht musician . . . Pearl Blau, President of R. H. Lacy & Co., addressed a meeting of department store executives the other day. We knew her when she was just Secretary of the Senior Cabinet.

News from here and there:

Harold Tall, the Senator from Brooklyn, has started a filibuster which up until now has lasted forty days and nights with no sign of a letup. Tall first showed his aptitude for filibustering in New Utrecht High School where his teachers couldn't shut him up . . . Edith Feinstein, the first woman president, has broken another tradition. She has officially proclaimed that the school year is to begin on July 1 and continue until September 1 at which date vacation will officially commence.

ORGANIZATION SQUAD

"COMET" STAFF

BOYS' DEAN'S SQUAD

We the Senior Class of January 1940, although sound of mind or body (and slowly getting decrepit with old age), do hereby ordain that the following is what we graciously and so humbly bestow to those that have aided and befriended us within the past four years of imprisonment.

Just one problem faces the writers of this will. It seems that the members of this senior class have taken so much, that little is left to leave. However, like most graduates of '40 (1840), we DO or DIE in the attempt.—

And so, here lies our futile effort.

last will-testament

To Dr. Rogalin—we leave
New Utrecht High School, 8,000

students, a dozen trees, (with hopes for leaves), and four shrubs.

To Dr. Leuchs—we leave a chaise lounge so that he may rest between sessions of day and night school.

To Mr. Charry, "Director of the Band"—we leave a music office not cluttered up with books, coats and all the hoi-polloi that took up so much sacred space.

To Miss Phillips—we leave Brooklyn, C.C.N.Y., Columbia, Hunter, and all the rest. (We don't want them.)

To Mr. Leonard—we leave a little note book and pencil so that he may recall in time of need the names of all his illustrious adopted sons and daughters.

To Mr. Drachman—we leave an umbrella. This will make his resemblance to Chamberlain complete.

To Mr. Cohen—we leave a box of "Polli-Titian Cigars" (with hopes that his colleagues will enjoy the change).

To Mr. Serwer—we leave a battering ram which will help him to get to his desk in the N.U.H.S. office once in a while.

To Grubnick and Jaffe, Inc.—we leave the suggestion that they draw up a new charter—entirely omitting late passes and detention. (We hope that this won't drive them to bankruptcy.)

To Mrs. Swahn—we leave a box of chalk with the profound hope that she uses it to have the students understand what she writes as well as herself.

As for Mr. Hirsch—WE LEAVE!

To the incoming Seniors—we leave a new set of Eco. answers gently engraved upon the newly planed desks. (We doubt if even these will help.)

To Mrs. Byrne—we leave our sincere appreciation for all the time and effort she spent in managing the Senior Class safely and soundly for 6 months. (Another few months and just think of the results.)

To our fellow Seniors—we leave hopes that all their ambitions and aspirations are reached with great success.
